Question

Describe a person who is good at learning and speaking new languages You should say: How you got to know him/her How he/she learns a new language What languages he/she can speak And explain how you feel about him/her

Answer

Band score: 6.5

I want to describe my childhood friend, Xiang. He is very good at learning and speaking new languages. We have been neighbors for over ten years because we live in the same block in our hometown.

As far as I know, Xiang is very clever and he is very good at learning new skills, especially languages. Last summer vacation, he traveled to Moscow with his father. That was the first time he had visited Moscow, so he was very interested in everything there.

He met a lot of Russians and made friends with them, but he couldn't communicate with them because he wasn't good at Russian at that time. What's more, he loved the culture and history very much, so he decided to learn Russian. So that he could communicate with his friends fluently and learn more about Russian culture.

He is very self-disciplined and hardworking, so he spent two hours every day learning Russian in his spare time. Sometimes, when I talk to him, he teaches me some Russian and shares interesting experiences from Moscow.

In my opinion, Xiang is very good at learning new things, and he is also a kind person. I'm happy that I can be friends with him, and I have learned a lot from him.

- The answer is coherent and easy to follow.
- You clearly explain how you know him, how he learns a language, and your feelings about him.
- However, the question asks "What languages can he speak?", and you do not answer this directly.
- "So that he could..." is a sentence fragment.
- There are too many simple sentences beginning with "So", "And", and "What's more".
- The story is quite natural, but the language range is closer to Band 6 than Band 7.

Polished

I'd like to talk about my childhood friend Xiang, who is exceptionally good at learning and speaking foreign languages.

I have known him for more than ten years because we grew up in the same neighborhood and have been close friends since childhood. He has always been a quick learner and is particularly talented when it comes to languages.

As far as I know, he can speak Mandarin, English, and Russian. What impressed me most was how quickly he learned Russian. Last summer, he traveled to Moscow with his father and became fascinated by the local culture and history. During the trip, he met many local people and wanted to communicate with them more effectively. That experience motivated him to start learning Russian seriously after he returned home.

To improve his language skills, he follows a very disciplined routine. He spends around two hours studying Russian every day, including learning vocabulary, listening to podcasts, and practicing conversations online. He also tries to expose himself to the language as much as possible by watching videos and reading articles in Russian.

As a result, his progress has been remarkable. Sometimes he even teaches me some simple expressions and tells me interesting stories about Russian culture, which I find fascinating.

I really admire Xiang because he is not only intelligent but also hardworking and self-disciplined. His dedication has shown me that learning a new language is possible if you are willing to put in consistent effort. I always enjoy talking with him, and I have learned a great deal from his attitude toward learning.

Q1

Are there many people who can speak foreign languages in your country?

A1

Band score: 6.5

Yes, there are many students in China who can speak foreign languages because there are numerous courses available at the university level. Some students major in foreign languages like English, Russian, and French, so they are very proficient in speaking them. Meanwhile, others who are interested in foreign languages learn to speak them independently by using open-source videos on the internet. As a result, many people in China have learned to speak foreign languages fluently.

- The answer is clear and relevant.
- "open-source videos" is not natural here. Say "online videos" or "free online resources".
- The focus is too much on students. The question asks about people in your country in general.
- The conclusion slightly overstates the situation ("many people ... fluently").

Polished

Yes, I would say so. In China, many people can speak at least one foreign language, especially English.

One reason is that foreign languages are taught in schools from an early age. In addition, many people learn languages independently through online courses, videos, and apps.

Although not everyone can speak a foreign language fluently, I think the number of multilingual/blingual people has been increasing steadily in recent years due to globalization and international communication.

Q2

Does speaking other languages help at work?

A2

Band score: 6.5

Yes, speaking other languages is beneficial for people at work. People can gain more opportunities related to international business. If they are proficient in English or other languages, for example, some of my classmates used to work as translators at international conferences. They were able to earn money and improve their skills because of their fluent speaking abilities.

- Good example.
- "fluent speaking abilities" sounds unnatural.
- The first two sentences are slightly repetitive.
- Could explain more specifically how languages help in careers.

Polished

Yes, definitely. Being able to speak a foreign language can create more career opportunities, especially in international companies and global industries.

For example, people who are proficient in English can communicate with overseas clients, attend international conferences, or even work abroad. Some of my classmates have worked as translators at international events, which allowed them to gain practical experience as well as earn some income.

In today's globalized world, language skills can be a significant advantage in the job market.

Q3

Do people learn any languages other than English?

A3

Band score: 6.0

Yes, there are more and more people learning languages other than English. For example, many Chinese people have started to learn Russian. So that they can speak fluently when they travel to Moscow. I think the reason why people start to learn languages other than English is that global trade and travel are becoming increasingly popular. Although English is important, it is also valuable and meaningful to study other languages, because people can get more opportunities by speaking multiple languages.

- "So that they can..." is a sentence fragment.
- The Moscow example is a bit too specific and not fully developed.
- Good explanation of globalization.

Polished

Yes, absolutely. Although English is still the most widely learned foreign language, many people are now studying other languages as well, such as Russian, Japanese, Korean, and Spanish.

One reason is that international trade, tourism, and cultural exchanges have become increasingly common. As a result, people often learn a language that is related to their career goals, academic interests, or travel plans.

I think learning multiple languages can be very beneficial because it allows people to communicate with a wider range of people and access more opportunities.

Q4

Why is it easier for children to learn new things than for adults?

A4

Band score: 6.0

I think there are many reasons why children learn new things more easily than adults. Firstly, children are young, energetic, and creative, so they can accept new ideas more readily and form new habits. Secondly, since children haven't acquired a lot of prior knowledge about languages, they can start learning without any pressure. In contrast, many adults feel anxious about learning because they worry they are not good at it. For example, when I was young, I spent a lot of time and energy reading books and studying new things, but I wasn't willing to continue because of the academic pressure and lack of motivation.

- The last example actually weakens your argument because you say you were unwilling to continue.
- "prior knowledge about languages" is too narrow because the question is about learning new things in general.
- The logic is good but could be more concise.

Polished

I think children generally learn new things more easily because they are naturally curious and less afraid of making mistakes.

They are usually willing to try new activities without worrying too much about failure. In contrast, adults often have more responsibilities and less free time, which can make learning more challenging.

Another reason is that children tend to adapt to new environments and habits more quickly. This is why they often pick up new languages or skills faster than adults.

Q5

How do people learn new things?

A5

> Band score: 6.5

I think people learn new things by gaining knowledge and practicing. For example, when I started to learn English, I read many books and learned a lot about grammar and pronunciation. Then I tried my best to read and speak so that I could practice. I think it is important for us to acquire new knowledge so that we can have a deep understanding of new concepts. What's more, we are supposed to practice more so that we can use the new skills efficiently.

- Good structure: learning → practice.
- Repetition of "so that".
- "use the new skills efficiently" is slightly unnatural.
- The example is relevant and personal.

Polished

I think people usually learn new things through a combination of studying and practice.

For example, when I was learning English, I first built a foundation by studying grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation. After that, I practiced by reading books, speaking with others, and listening to English materials regularly.

In my opinion, both stages are equally important. Learning provides the necessary knowledge, while practice helps people apply what they have learned and gradually become more skilled and confident.

17. 遇到的科技问题

P2

Question

Describe a challenging technological problem you faced You should say: What the problem was When and where you faced it How challenging it was And explain how you solved it

Answer

Band score: 6.5

Two months ago, I faced a tough technical problem when my computer operating system broke down. It happened while I was doing my homework as usual. My computer suddenly shut down without any warning. However, the deadline for my homework was approaching, so I had to submit it on time.

I decided to go to the library and finish my homework there. After successfully submitting my homework, I tried to fix the computer problem myself. At first, I searched for useful information online, but I couldn't find a solution. So, I asked some of my friends who majored in computer science for help.

Fortunately, with their guidance and support, I successfully fixed the problem. My friends were very kind and helpful, and I appreciated their assistance. It was a valuable and meaningful experience, and I learned a new skill: how to troubleshoot technical problems on my own.

- The answer clearly covers all four bullet points.
- Good personal story with a logical sequence of events.
- "Hopefully" is incorrect here because the result already happened. Use "Fortunately."
- The description of the technical problem is too vague. What exactly was wrong with the operating system?
- "valuable and meaningful experience" is a common IELTS phrase and sounds slightly memorized.
- The ending could focus more on what you learned and why the experience was important.

Polished

I'd like to talk about a challenging technological problem I faced about two months ago when my computer suddenly stopped working.

At that time, I was at home working on an important assignment. Without any warning, the operating system crashed and the computer remained off whenever I tried to turn it on. What made the situation particularly stressful was that the deadline for the assignment was only a few hours away.

Since I couldn't use my own computer, I immediately went to the university library and finished the assignment on one of the public computers there. After submitting my work, I focused on solving the technical issue.

At first, I searched online for possible solutions and watched several tutorial videos, but none of them worked. Eventually, I contacted a few friends who study computer science. They helped me identify the cause of the problem and guided me through the process of repairing the operating system. After several attempts, the computer finally started working normally again.

I found this experience quite challenging because I was under a lot of pressure and had very limited time to deal with both my assignment and the computer problem. However, it was also a rewarding experience because I learned some useful skills and became more confident when dealing with technical issues. Since then, I have been more willing to solve computer problems independently instead of relying on others immediately.

Q1

What are the advantages and disadvantages of AI?

A1

> Band score: 6.5

As the saying goes, every coin has two sides. Regarding the advantages of AI, it can improve productivity and efficiency in society, thereby accelerating social development. For example, AI can replace some repetitive and dangerous jobs, so that humans do not have to take risks or feel bored while performing them. However, there are also some disadvantages. It may cause unemployment issues because more and more people are losing their jobs nowadays. What's more, the widespread use of AI may lead to leaks of our personal information.

- Good balance between advantages and disadvantages.
- "As the saying goes, every coin has two sides" is overused in IELTS and sounds memorized.
- "more and more people are losing their jobs nowadays" is a bit exaggerated.
- The answer could be more specific and natural.

Polished

I think AI has both advantages and disadvantages.

On the positive side, it can improve productivity by helping people complete tasks more quickly and accurately. It is also useful for handling repetitive or potentially dangerous work, which can reduce risks for human workers.

However, AI also creates some challenges. For example, it may replace certain jobs and force workers to learn new skills. In addition, many people are concerned about issues such as privacy, data security, and the misuse of personal information.

Q2

Do you think people today should learn about AI technology?

A2

> Band score: 6.5

Yes, I strongly believe that everyone should learn about AI technology. Firstly, AI is a very useful tool. We can improve our productivity and efficiency by learning how to use it. For example, large language models have dramatically reduced the time I spend on my homework every day. Secondly, I think it is important for us to keep pace with the development of science and technology so that we can gain a deeper and broader understanding of the world.

- Good personal example.
- "everyone should learn about AI" is slightly absolute.
- "deeper and broader understanding of the world" is a little vague.

Polished

Yes, I think people should have at least a basic understanding of AI technology.

Nowadays, AI is becoming part of everyday life, so knowing how to use it can help people study and work more efficiently. For instance, I often use AI tools to organize information and improve my learning efficiency.

In addition, understanding AI helps people make informed/wise decisions about technology and adapt more easily to future changes in society.

Q3

Should children learn to use AI?

A3

Band score: 6.0

Yes, I think it is important and meaningful for children to learn how to use AI. Firstly, children are often creative and innovative, so they can perform better when using AI. For example, when young children come up with a good idea but have not implemented it before, they can ask AI for help to bring it to life. Secondly, learning to use AI at a young age can help children broaden their horizons and open their minds.

- "perform better when using AI" is unclear.
- "broaden their horizons and open their minds" is a very common IELTS cliché.
- The answer should mention responsible use of AI.

Polished

Yes, I think children should learn how to use AI, as long as they receive proper guidance.

AI can be a useful learning tool because it helps children find information, explore new ideas, and develop their creativity. For example, they can use AI to assist with school projects or learn about topics that interest them.

At the same time, children should be taught how to use AI responsibly and think critically about the provided information rather than accepting everything without question.

Q4

How can AI help in our lives?

A4

Band score: 6.5

AI helps people in many aspects of their lives. Firstly, some repetitive and dangerous jobs are being replaced by AI, so humans do not have to take risks or feel bored while doing such tasks. For example, robots are helping with jobs like washing, cleaning, or carrying heavy items. Secondly, with the development of computer science, productivity and efficiency have improved thanks to AI. As a result, people no longer need to spend too much time or energy on work, allowing them to have enough time to relax and enjoy life.

- Good examples.
- "people no longer need to spend too much time on work" is too strong and unrealistic.
- Again, too dependent on Firstly/Secondly.

Polished

AI helps people in many different ways.

For example, it can automate routine tasks such as data processing, scheduling, and household chores, which saves time and effort. AI is also widely used in areas such as healthcare, education, and transportation to improve efficiency and accuracy.

As a result, people can focus more on creative or complex tasks instead of spending all their time on repetitive work.

Q5

Do you think students are overly reliant on AI?

A5

Band score: 6.0

Yes, I do. I think many students have already relied on AI. Firstly, because it is a very useful tool, many people use it to do homework or study. For example, I use AI almost every day, and it helps me solve a lot of problems related to my coursework. Secondly, we can learn more and acquire new skills better with the help of AI. There is a lot of useful information on the internet, and AI can help us find it. And explain it to us. However, there are also some disadvantages. Students may not be able to study or solve problems independently because of their reliance on AI.

- "And explain it to us." is a sentence fragment.
- Good balance between benefits and drawbacks.
- "rely on AI" should be "become overly reliant on AI" for greater accuracy.

Polished

Yes, I think some students have become overly dependent on AI.

Because AI can provide answers quickly, many students use it to help with assignments, research, and exam preparation. In fact, I use AI regularly when studying because it helps me understand difficult concepts more efficiently.

However, excessive dependence on AI can be problematic. If students always rely on technology to solve problems, they may not develop enough independent thinking or problem-solving skills.

Q6

What can teachers do to stop students relying too much on AI?

A6

Band score: 6.5

I think teachers can help stop students from relying too much on AI because they have a deeper and wider understanding of new technology. Firstly, teachers can help students become aware of the risks of relying too heavily on AI. For example, teachers are familiar with the side effects of using AI, such as leaks of personal information. Secondly, it is important for students to learn how to study independently under the guidance of their teachers. This allows them to improve their ability to solve problems, and study more efficiently, so that they can perform better by themselves instead of relying on AI.

- Good ideas and logical structure.
- "deeper and wider understanding" is unnatural; "better understanding" is more natural.
- Privacy concerns are not the main reason students overuse AI.
- Independent thinking should be emphasized more.

Polished

I think teachers play an important role in preventing students from becoming too dependent on AI.

One approach is to teach students how to use AI as a learning tool rather than a replacement for thinking. Teachers can encourage students to evaluate information critically and solve problems on their own before seeking assistance from AI.

In addition, schools can design assignments that require creativity, discussion, and personal reflection. This makes it more difficult for students to rely entirely on AI-generated answers and helps them develop independent learning skills.

18. 名人出演的广告

P2

Describe an advertisement with a famous person in it You should say: Who the person is Where you can see it What the advertisement is about And explain how you feel about the advertisement

Answer

> Band score: 6.5

I'd like to talk about an advertisement featuring Mr. Wu, a famous actor in China. Many people know him because he is very handsome and charming. I used to stream videos on social media, so I first saw the advertisement while watching fitness-related content. It appeared quite frequently, so I saw it many times. It was for a protein powder product. I found the advertisement interesting because Mr. Wu talked extensively about the product's functions and emphasized the importance of staying fit in our daily routines. He mentioned that maintaining a balanced diet is crucial for our bodies. The background music in the video was exciting, which helped attract my attention. Furthermore, given Mr. Wu's popularity, the video reached many people online, and I bought the product after watching it. I think the advertisement was very successful because it demonstrated the product's practical benefits and captured the public's interest.

- "Mr. Wu" is unclear. IELTS examiners prefer a full name, such as Daniel Wu.
- "stream videos on social media" → unnatural; better: "watch videos on social media" or "browse social media".
- "talked extensively about the product's functions" → sounds formal and promotional.
- Too much focus on the product and not enough on your feelings about the advertisement.
- Several sentences are descriptive but lack personal reactions.
- Good coverage of all four bullet points, but the answer sounds slightly factual rather than story-like.

Polished

I'd like to talk about an advertisement featuring Daniel Wu, a well-known actor in China.

I first came across this advertisement while browsing short videos on social media. Since I often watch fitness-related content, the advertisement appeared quite frequently in my mobile phone, so I became very familiar with it.

The advertisement was promoting a protein powder product aimed at people who exercise regularly. In the video, Daniel Wu talked about the importance of maintaining a healthy lifestyle and getting enough nutrition to support physical fitness. The advertisement also showed several scenes of people working out, which made the product appear energetic and appealing.

What impressed me most was Daniel Wu himself. Because he is well known for his healthy image and good appearance, I felt that he was a suitable person to promote this type of product. In addition, the background music was energetic, which made the advertisement more engaging and memorable.

Overall, I had a positive impression of this advertisement. It was informative without being boring, and it successfully caught my attention. In fact, it even encouraged me to learn more about the product, which shows that the advertisement achieved its purpose quite effectively.

P3

Q1

What are the advantages and disadvantages of advertisements?

A1

Band score: 6.5

Q1

Videos often appear when we are streaming or watching TV, which can be annoying because they distract our attention, and waste our time and energy. For example, I really dislike ads related to entertainment content, since I just want to enjoy the movie. However, there are also some advantages. Some advertisements help products reach more people, allowing them to meet consumer expectations and needs. As for me, I often buy products that have been advertised by celebrities. Because I think. They are more trustworthy.

- "streaming" → better: "watching videos online"
- "distract our attention" → better: "interrupt our viewing experience"
- Fragment: "Because I think. They are more trustworthy."
- Good balance between advantages and disadvantages
- The example is relevant and personal

Polished

Every coin has two sides. On the one hand, they can be annoying because they often interrupt videos, TV programs, or context. For example, I dislike advertisements that appear in the middle of a movie because they disrupt my viewing experience. On the other hand, advertisements help consumers learn about new products and services. They also help companies reach potential customers more effectively. Personally, I have discovered several useful products through advertisements, so I think they can be beneficial when used appropriately.

Q2

Why are many advertisements endorsed by celebrities? How useful are they?

A2

Many advertisements are endorsed by celebrities because they have many fans and a wider influence. I think it's very useful for celebrities to appear in advertisements. Firstly, many fans or consumers are willing to buy products endorsed by celebrities. For example, fans love their idols or influence, so they are willing to pay for the products to support them. Secondly, advertisements endorsed by celebrities can help make products more trustworthy, so people will not worry about the quality when buying them. As for me, I like to buy clothes that are endorsed by famous celebrities because I think they are in high quality. What's more, a famous celebrity can help a product to reach more people, so that people can know the function of the product better.

- Too many Firstly/Secondly/What's more
- "fans love their idols or influence" → grammar mistake
- "in high quality" → better: "of high quality"
- "the function of the product" → unnatural; better: "its features and benefits"
- Some claims are too absolute (people will not worry about the quality)

Polished

Many companies choose celebrities to endorse their products because celebrities already have a large amunt of fans and strong public influence. As a result, advertisements featuring famous people are more likely to attract attention. In addition, consumers may trust a product more if it is promoted by someone they admire. For example, some people buy clothing or sports products because they are endorsed by their favorite celebrities. Therefore, celebrity endorsements can be an effective way to increase both product awareness and sales.

Q3

What is the most important factor in an advertisement?

A3

I think the most important factor in an advertisement is the function of the product rather than the videos or celebrity endorsements. A good product is supposed to meet people's expectations and practical needs., So it's important for businesses to highlight the function of the product in their advertisements. For example, sometimes I do buy products endorsed by celebrities, but I care more about their performance when I use them. If people buy low -quality products because of an advertisement, they will not be willing to buy them again, no matter how good the advertisement is. Although advertisements can help products reach more people, the most important factor must be the product itself.

- Punctuation error: "needs., So"
- "the function of the product" is repeated several times
- Strong logic and clear opinion
- This is one of your stronger answers

Polished

I think the most important factor in an advertisement is whether it clearly explains the product's benefits and value. While celebrities and creative videos can attract attention, consumers ultimately care about whether the product meets their needs. For example, I may become interested in a product because of an advertisement, but I will only buy it if it seems useful and reliable. In the long run, product quality is far more important than marketing techniques.

Q4

Why are some advertisements boring?

A4

I think there are many factors that make advertisements boring. Firstly, if a product cannot meet people's needs, they are not interested in the advertisement and find it dull. For example, I really dislike some advertisements for women's clothing, because I am a man and would not buy such clothes. Secondly, some advertisements just show the function of the product without any creative design, which fails to attract people's attention. People are more willing to watch advertisements if they are interesting.

- Good examples

- Too dependent on Firstly/Secondly
- The answer could discuss repetition as another reason

Polished

There are several reasons why some advertisements are boring. One reason is that the products being advertised may not be relevant to the audience. For instance, I am unlikely to pay attention to the products that I would never buy. Another reason is that some advertisements lack creativity and simply provide information without telling an interesting story. As a result, viewers quickly lose interest and skip them whenever possible.

Q5

Is advertising important for a company? Why?

A5

Yes, advertising is important for a company because it can make people know the company better. Firstly, an advertisement can help a product or a company reach more people, so that they are more willing to buy its products or services when they encounter them again. Secondly, it's meaningful and useful for a company to build a brand through advertising. For example, a good advertisement can help people remember it.

- "make people know the company better" → better: "increase public awareness of the company"
- Overuse of Firstly/Secondly
- Good ideas but slightly repetitive

Polished

Yes, I believe advertising is extremely important for companies. First of all, it increases public awareness of a company's products and services. In addition, advertising helps businesses build a strong brand image and stand out from their competitors. For example, memorable advertisements can make consumers think of a particular brand whenever they need a certain product. As a result, advertising often plays a key role in a company's success.

Q6

Which is more effective, online advertising or offline advertising?

A6

I think online advertising is more effective than offline advertising. Firstly, with the development of computer science, many people are streaming videos online, so online advertising can reach a large audience on the internet. For example, almost every social media platform in China displays advertisements online. Secondly, offline advertisements are not able to reach people outside the region. Thirdly, it's more useful and meaningful for online advertisements to showcase products or services better.

- "with the development of computer science" → unnatural; better: "with the growth of the internet"
- Too many Firstly/Secondly/Thirdly
- "showcase products or services better" is vague
- Good overall argument

Polished

I think online advertising is generally more effective than offline advertising nowadays. One reason is that a huge number of people spend time on social media, websites, and video platforms every day, allowing online advertisements to reach a larger amount of audience. In addition, companies can find potential consumers based on their interests and online behavior. Compared with traditional billboards or posters, online advertisements are also easier to update and measure, making them a more efficient marketing tool.

19. 推荐旅行过的地方

P2

Question

Describe a place you have travelled to that you would like to recommend to others You should say: What it is Where it is What you saw and did there And explain why you would like to recommend it to others

Answer

I would like to describe Beijing, which is a city I traveled to last summer vacation. I think it is an excellent place to visit. Beijing is the capital of China. And is located in the north of the country. I traveled there with my friend Xiang, and we stayed for about two weeks, which was quite long, and we enjoyed many local foods and scenic spots. Firstly, we visited many places of interest that we had only seen on the internet before. They were fascinating and exciting. What impressed me most was learning about the history while visiting them. What's more, we talked a lot with the locals, who shared many interesting stories with us, allowing us to gain a deep understanding of the culture. Thirdly, we tried many delicious and famous dishes. For example, I liked the Peking duck and the noodles. Overall, I think it was a memorable and rewarding trip, so I recommend Beijing to you. Because Beijing is a historical and cultural city, it broadened my horizons and opened my mind. I think you would like it if you travel there.

- 太多并列句 and which and
- Firstly/Secondly/Thirdly 像背诵太明显模板化
- 结尾重复且空泛 broadened my horizons, opened my mind

Polished

I'd like to talk about Beijing, which I visited during my summer vacation last year with my childhood friend Xiang.

We stayed there for around two weeks, so we had plenty of time to explore the city. Beijing is the capital of China and is well known for its long history and cultural heritage.

One of the most memorable parts of the trip was visiting famous historical sites such as the Forbidden City and the Great Wall. Before the trip, I had only seen these places online, so seeing them in person was really exciting.

Another thing I enjoyed was talking with local people. They told us many interesting stories about the city, which helped me understand the local culture better.

Of course, the food was also amazing. I especially liked Peking duck because it was very delicious and different from the food in my hometown.

Overall, I would definitely recommend Beijing to others because it is a city where you can enjoy history, culture, and food all at the same time.

P3

Q1

Where do people in your country often go for holidays?

A1

There are several types of cities that Chinese people often visit for holidays. Firstly, some people like to go to historical cities in China, such as Beijing and Xi'an, which are rich in history and offer many cultural sites. Secondly, there are also modern cities. For example, I like Shanghai very much because it wis very modern and advanced. I felt excited when I visited there. I feel excited for the first time. Thirdly, some people prefer natural scenery, so they may travel to eastern China for their holidays.

- "wis" → spelling mistake: is
- "I visited there" → better: I visited the city / I went there
- "I feel excited for the first time" → unnatural and grammatically inconsistent
- Overuse of Firstly/Secondly/Thirdly
- "travel to eastern China" is too vague; many famous natural destinations are not necessarily in eastern China

Polished

Chinese people travel to different places depending on their interests. Some prefer historical cities such as Beijing and Xi'an because they can learn about Chinese history and culture. Others enjoy visiting modern cities like Shanghai, which is famous for its skyscrapers and fashion lifestyle. In addition, many people choose destinations with beautiful natural scenery, such as mountains, lakes, or coastal areas. Personally, I really enjoyed visiting Shanghai because the city's modern atmosphere was quite different from what I was used to.

Q2

What is the ideal length for a holiday?

A2

I think it depends on different people. On the one hand, some people prefer to stay in a city for about seven days because they may. Be busy with their work or study, so they can only enjoy the culture and history there, within that period. On the other hand, some people want to have a deep experience of a city, so they may stay there for a month or longer. For example, I like to spend my whole summer vacation traveling, so that I can broaden my horizons and open my mind.

- Grammar issue: "they may. Be busy"
- "have a deep experience of a city" → better: gain a deeper understanding of a city
- "broaden my horizons and open my mind" is overused in IELTS and sounds memorized
- Good balance between different viewpoints

Polished

I think it depends on a person's schedule and travel goals. Some people only stay for a few days because they have limited vacation time. Others prefer spending several weeks in one place so that they can explore it more thoroughly and experience the local culture fully. Personally, I enjoy taking longer trips during my summer vacation because they give me enough time to explore new places at a relaxed pace.

Q3

How do people usually plan holidays?

A3

People plan their holidays in many ways. Firstly, they consider the destination and the timing., Which I think are the most important factors because it allows them to book tickets and manage their schedule effectively. Furthermore, people also need to arrange accommodation and transport. For example, my father prefers to rent a car whenever he travels, as he finds it very convenient for visiting scenic spots. Additionally, there is useful information available online that allows them To, refer to others' experiences when planning their trips.

- Punctuation mistakes: "timing., Which", "To,"
- "it allows them" → should be they allow people to... because the subject is plural
- Again, too many formal linking words
- Good practical example

Polished

People usually start by choosing a destination and deciding when they want to travel. After that, they book transportation and accommodation based on their budget and schedule. Many people also search online for travel guides and reviews to learn from other travelers' experiences. For example, my father often rents a car when traveling because it gives him more flexibility when visiting different attractions.

Q4

Is it important to plan a holiday ahead?

A4

It depends on person. Making a plan for a holiday ahead can help us manage our time better, we can have a whole view of the holiday. For example, I prefer making plans for my summer vaction so that I can make use the long period of time. However, there are no doubt that some people enjoy the surprise during the experience.

- "depends on person" → depends on the person
- Run-on sentence: manage our time better, we can...
- "have a whole view of the holiday" → unnatural
- "vaction" → spelling mistake: vacation
- "make use the long period of time" → make good use of the time available
- "there are no doubt" → there is no doubt that

Polished

I think planning a holiday in advance is generally important. It helps people manage their time and budget more effectively, and it reduces the risk of unexpected problems during the trip. For example, I usually plan my summer vacation ahead of time so that I can make the most of my free time. However, not everyone enjoys detailed planning. Some people prefer being flexible because they find unexpected experiences more exciting and memorable.
